Custom Hard Cover

Known in the print trade as 'case making' -constructing custom made hard cover using your artwork with a gloss laminated finish.

Screw-Post

Screw-post Binding - Several different ways of binding your work using special screws (available in brass, nickel & plastic finishes). Particularly suited for portfolios as it leaves the ability to add or remove pages.

Saddle-Stitch

Used for magazines, look books, booklets, catalogues, programmes, newsletters and brochures etc. Pages are creased, folded, and stapled together by punching two wires through the document's outside spine, then bending the wires flat on the inside centre fold to grip all the pages.

DID YOU KNOW? The way they are offered to traditional stitching machines makes the books look like saddles, hence the name for the binding process.

Perfect +flyout

Perfect Bind

The printed inner sheets (book block) are collated, trimmed off at the spine and then roughed up to improve bonding with a hot melt glue. While this hi-tec resin remains hot its wrap-around cover is attached to the book block. Hampton always crease both back and front covers for ease of opening and reducing stress on spine's binding edge. A final trim on the open edge completes the process. Maximum spine length is 420mm. We recommend that most coated (gloss/silk) papers are best avoided as the adhesives can't penetrate their harder surfaces.

Hard Cover

Text pages.

Spiral

Utilizes a smooth round plastic or wire coil to hold pages together. Allows book to lie flat when open and pages can be turned 180° to the back if desired.

Wire

Pages turn easily. Sheets stay flat when opened (impossible with gluing or stitching). Different materials and thickness can be combined anywhere in the book. Possible removal or replacement of sheets and virtually no size restrictions. (Also see Reverse Bind)

Foil Blocking (cover&spine)

Foil Printing

Hard Cover Books & Titling options

Reverse Wire

Reverse Binding - Allows for an expandable inside cover where a large spread image is important. The binding is hidden and the spine is flat. Back flap can be pasted down or left free.

Hard Pouch Cover

Cover artwork is placed behind a cover pouch which is then passed through a hot laminator to seal the cover onto the front of the book, giving a customised, gloss laminated finish. Especially useful where speed is essential and available in black or white, A4 portrait.

What is bleed?

Bleed is a printing term for the effect of printing right up to the edge of the page; where in fact the print area is extended 3mm beyond the required size and then trimmed off at the finished stage. Bleed ensures that no un-printed edges appear after the final trim. If your document is text only and has a white border around the edges, you do not need to worry about bleed.

InDesign

Always set your page up the exact finished size you want it to be.

For best results save your document as a 'Press Quality' PDF (always remember to add 3mm bleed in settings when exporting). If designing in spreads, export as single pages. Tick the crop marks box.

Bleed will not appear if you haven't physically dragged your image to the bleed guides. Just because you add it to the document set up does not mean it will magically appear after exporting, unless you have put something in the bleed area to start with.

Photoshop

In Photoshop, you must add the bleed onto the dimensions of the finished size. Always add 6mm to the width and 6mm to the height of the overall measurement. So, if you want an A4 (210 x 297mm) you must set the page size to 216 x 303mm. Make sure you guideline 3mm from each edge, and you don't design important text near these guides. Always keep important text at least 15mm from the trim edges, more if you are having the pages bound into a book.

Very Important

If working in Photoshop, make sure you make a duplicate ('save as') and FLATTEN ALL LAYERS before saving as a PDF. Make sure you save as, so if you need to go back and make changes you have an unflattened version.

HELPFUL ADVICE:

We are happy to advise and help where possible preparing your artwork for print. However, please note, complicated jobs requiring lots of time and attention will incur an additional studio fee of £15 minimum.
